Dr. William A. Conway, Coroner's physician, testified to the post-morbem examination of Panisen's body and said that death resulted from a compound fracture of the skull and isogration of the brain, the result of injuries received from a sharp heavy instrument.

It is believed that Stereotyper A. H. Conn, who was found dead in Smith & McNell's Hotel yesterday, with the room filled with gas, was led to commit suicide by intemperate habits, which unsettled his mind. He left no explanation of his act.

It is said that Conn while foreman of a newspaper stereotyping room in this city about a year ago drove Alexander McLean to suicide by his persecutions. After McLean's about a year ago drove Alexander McLean to suicide by his persecutions. After McLean's death Conn is reputed to have declared that he intended to follow his victim's example.
